On August 6, nine federal agencies issued proposed regulations to reform the current rules that govern the partnerships between the federal government and faith-based social service providers. These rules govern situations like when the federal government provides funds to faith-based organizations to run soup kitchens, job training programs, and homeless shelters.

Americans United long advocated for these changes, and are pleased that the proposed regulations implement key religious liberty protections and bolster the church state protections that must apply to such programs.

Below are the nine comments AU submitted to the agencies:

- Department of Agriculture
- Department of Education
- Department of Health and Human Services
- Department of Homeland Security
- Department of Housing and Urban Development
- Department of Justice
- Department of Labor
- Department of Veterans Affairs
- Agency for International Development
